

General Management Resumes

SKILLS

Skills sought within your field.	Examples of how this skill can be demonstrated on a resume.
Verbal and written communication skills: critical and used constantly to convey ideas and gain buy-in, analyze results, lead and guide team members and to persuade others. Used when leading teams/projects, writing reports and emails, working with customers, collaborating with team members, and presenting to senior managers.	Education • Counseled and mentored undergraduate students as a Career Advisor Experience • Presented findings to senior management on the efficacy of training program, which resulted in a complete restructuring of program • Directed all communications and briefings with Executive Committee on the project enabling improved coordination and database sharing across business units Additional • Tutored adults in English as a Second Language (ESL) through the Wake County Literacy Council
Ability to execute/implement: results-oriented and proven ability to execute a project or strategy are important because a large part of the job is implementing strategies and executing new initiatives.	Education • Co-managed spring charity auction, resulting in a 30% increase in funds raised and $42K donated to children's charities Experience • Increased cash flow by reducing accounts receivable cycle to 21 days, beating industry average by 25% • Increased sales 200% with key targeted accounts through developing product/service solutions and client relationship building • Led safety portion of team study on local Quality Control program and integrated findings into program redesign resulting in 40% process performance improvement Additional • Organized adult literacy and environmental awareness programs for the Lions Club
Analytical/problem solving: It is important to be able interpret quantitative analyses and to be able to employ these analyses to address specific organization problems or challenges.	Education • Conducted feasibility study and evaluated growth opportunities for a non-profit organization, as part of the Small Business Consulting Group Experience • Analyzed vertical markets, channel capabilities and trends through in-depth industry interviews resulting in the creation of strategic recommendations including new growth opportunities and e-business plan for wire and cable manufacturer • Reduced inventory levels by 35% over 12-month period through conducting a strategic optimization to reduce costs and improve operations

Skills sought within your field.	Examples of how this skill can be demonstrated on a resume.
Leadership: ability to lead both people and projects by directing, influencing, prioritizing and motivating others. Try to emphasize your leadership experience in a business setting. Understand what leadership means to individual firm, it could be leading undergraduates and cross-functional teams, it could be collaborating with team members and communicating ideas to senior leaders to gain buy-in in order to best execute a project.	Education - Co-chair of Chicago Women in Business group; led initiative to increase undergraduate women's awareness of MBA careers Experience - Led cross-functional team for TQM program; planned and executed plant-wide training series for 140 people - Managed a 26-person maintenance and operations division producing $200M in annual revenue; division achieved 100% of production goals Additional - Committee co-chair of the Young Leadership Division of the Jewish Federation - Led community theatre's marketing efforts and increased subscriptions by 20% in two years

ATTRIBUTES

Attributes sought within your field.	Examples of how this attribute can be demonstrated on a resume.
Interest in managing people: increasingly, this will become a key part of your role as a general manager. However, you may not have actually managed people at this point. Choose experiences that indicate desire/experience motivating or developing others is one way to address this challenge. Give examples of your own initiative and creativity.	Education - Served as a Resident Advisor, advised and nurtured group of 35 freshmen students through process of adapting to college-life Experience - Led and motivated consultant team to meet project deliverables and resolve productivity issues - Created, implemented, and delivered a complex integrated training program for junior management professional development facilitating career advancement
Ability to handle/manage change: all companies undergo significant changes at some point and often experience continual change in the current business climate. The ability to help facilitate and embrace change is a positive attribute in any situation.	Experience - Increased productivity and consistency of marketing processes for a 15-person sales team through developing and implementing a sales automation software tool - Redesigned and standardized training program for new project hires achieving 40% reduction in training effort

Attributes sought within your field.	Examples of how this attribute can be demonstrated on a resume.
Ability to work both in teams and individually: as a general manager your work will involve leading, serving on teams as well as working alone. Emphasize your interpersonal skills.	Education • Collaborated with classmates to evaluate business model and develop strategic marketing plan for Chicago Community Ventures, a non-profit business development organization, as part of the New Venture Lab • Elected by peers at Booth to participate in 2011 Leadership Challenge Experience • Independently created database to track user training process, enabling management to monitor productivity of sales staff and allowing sales staff to communicate best practices • Led 12-person process improvement team during cross department review; analyzed processes and coordinated activities throughout all offices Additional • Played Center on basketball team for three years through Chicago Sport and Social Club; completed 4 marathons and 1 triathlon
Enthusiasm for company/position/industry: this is especially critical during the interviewing process. Employers want to know that you possess a sincere interest in their firm, their products, their customers and working for them specifically. Try to “tailor” your resume for the specific industry. Be prepared to answer the questions, “why this industry? why this function? why this firm?”.	Education • Organized and facilitated panel discussion of Biotechnology Industry executives during Career Fair • Trained Japanese team to present their "Education for Peace" project, selected by audience as conference’s best presentation • Led Booth’s 2012 Retail Trek during winter break Experience • Modeled Israel’s largest capital reduction project: $400MM dividend issuance for Israeli’s biggest communication company Additional • Volunteer for the past three years at the annual conference for the American Medical Association
Ability to manage ambiguity: The ability to analyze the situation and make decisions with limited/ambiguous information is a very important part of the general manager role. The examples don’t necessarily have to show high impact decisions. However, they need to demonstrate the ability to manage uncertainty and make decisions without having complete information.	Education/Additional • Won the Illinois college “best venture” award for creating a revolutionary business model for a new venture. Experience • Made final capital equipment allocation decisions as part of an ad-hoc $200MM M&A deal. • Led combat task forces of up to 20 people, tasked with executing highly important missions in unpredictable environments.

	Commanded crew of 12; led top-secret operations in unpredictable, uncertain and high stakes environments
Challenge ideas: As a general manager you need to have the ability to ask the right questions at the right time. Since in many cases you will be responsible for making a decision based on experts opinions this quality is very important.	Education - Completed three bachelor degrees from three different departments at Hamburg University. First student ever to achieve this feat. - Challenged the accepted notion of XYZ theory in final dissertation Experience - Persuaded the CEO of Exco Inc. to embark on a new business venture which was not part of the company's annual growth plan.

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

Areas of expertise sought within your field.	Examples of how this expertise can be demonstrated on a resume.
The areas of expertise can vary greatly depending on the unique background an individual brings to a position and the specific expertise the employer requires. Often for general management or rotational positions, a wide variety of previous experiences is acceptable and encouraged. Below are a few examples.
Experience researching and interpreting data into actionable decisions or strategies.	Education - Evaluated business model and developed strategic marketing plan for Chicago Community Ventures based on market surveys, interviews with comparable organizations, and secondary research Experience - Identified market opportunities, key customer targets and strategic implications through market sizing, segmentation and switching behavior analyses, resulting in market penetration strategy for energy firm
Project management: the ability to manage a project from start to finish; create and meet goals and having the ability to organize people and resources to meet objectives is important.	Experience - Oversaw team of 15 senior and junior consultants in the valuation department, advising the country's largest public companies. - Led cross-functional product launch team responsible for introducing a plush panda co-branded with the World Wildlife Fund, resulting in sales of 4K units in the first three weeks Additional - Led team of 20 volunteers responsible for raising money and organizing an annual state-wide music festival; raised more than $50K and generated highest attendance in event's history
Technical background: engineering or other technical backgrounds can often fit well into a general management setting.	Experience - Led 75-person division responsible for nuclear reactor operation, maintenance, training, and testing during nuclear reactor refueling and overhaul - Oversaw vaccine production facility responsible for $200M in sales; implemented cost savings initiatives leading to 10% reduction in variable costs