

Resumes: Marketing SKILLS

Skills sought within your field.	Examples of how this skill can be demonstrated on a resume.
Leadership The ability to identify a problem, come up with a solution and align the necessary resources (money, people, etc.) to get the job done and provide measurable results.	Education - Selected as co-chair of the Marketing Group Experience - Led a five-member team in implementing a marketing strategy to cross-sell new products to 4 million customers generating total revenue of over $100 million. Additional - Mentored a sixth-grade student weekly through the Pine Springs Pals education outreach program.
Teamwork The ability to work within a team environment, where most of what you do is dependent on others' work, and knowing how to influence/motivate people to help you accomplish your goals (even if it's not high on their priority list).	Education - Organized speaker panels at the Bio-tech Symposium as part of the Healthcare Group Experience - Led a client team at a leading wireless service provider in creating a customer relationship management reporting infrastructure. Additional - Member of the college swimming and water polo teams
Strategic thinking The ability to "see" beyond immediate deadlines and goals and to think about what will benefit the company the most and provide for greater revenue/profits/market share.	Experience - Analyzed payment delinquency and job category as risk predictors for the U.S. credit card customer base of 45 million. Results initiated a business case for including these variables in risk assessment. - Co-authored "white paper" on causes and resolution of channel conflict for Internet-based software provider serving channel dependent firms. Developed marketing tool which client uses to facilitate industry discussion and generate new business opportunities.
Creativity The ability to come up with an out-of-the-box solution or a new approach to solving a challenging problem.	Education - Awarded Booth Graduate Student Prize for excellence in undergraduate teaching Experience - Created an automated strategy performance reporting process increasing operational efficiency by 10%. - Developed and launched IT startup's first marketing/brand strategy and investor communication platform

Skills sought within your field.	Examples of how this skill can be demonstrated on a resume.
Analytical Problem Solving The ability to (1) define the problem that needs to be solved, (2) identify the data sources that you need to make a decision, and (3) conduct the relevant data analysis that will allow you to extract key findings or trends from numerous data sources and solve the problem	Experience - Performed a detailed analysis of the human/animal blood replacement market and proposed a marketing solution that included consumer targets, market segmentations, competitive analyses, and industry growth statistics. - Conducted extensive market research with current and potential customer base to measure knowledge of service, evaluate opportunities for growth, and gain competitor information. - Recognized competitive advantages and developed a marketing plan that defined company's strategic positioning. - Defined customer segments and targeted those predicted to generate significant future revenues. Additional - Spearheaded a database project for the Junior League of Chicago; analyzed current organizational structure, pinpointed key data sources, and created a framework that met information-sharing goals.
Project Management (execution/implementation of a plan) The ability to define and execute tasks on time, within budget, and meet/exceed expectations. Project management in marketing involves coordinating with/delegating to various cross-functional departments to accomplish tasks and prioritizing commitments/demands across many different projects at the same time	Education - Coordinated Marketing Group event within a tight budget; exceeded students expectations by bringing panelists to campus that had never spoken before. Experience - Recognized a faltering team and assumed a leadership role to ensure project goals were met. - Generated team solidarity by leading weekly meetings that identified obstacles, enhanced creativity, and eliminated inefficiencies. - Refocused team, allowing it to meet strict deadlines, fulfill impromptu requests, and surpass expectations. - Trained and motivated a 20-person team (including members from 12 different departments) to develop and maintain their respective departmental web sites. - Collaborated with end-users and external technical development team to create a Additional - Managed web site project for the Junior League of Chicago. - Supervised external vendors to ensure contract obligations and budgetary constraints were followed. - Solicited web site content from over 25 organizational experts. - Delegated proofreading and data gathering tasks to committee members.

Skills sought within your field.	Examples of how this skill can be demonstrated on a resume.
Presentation The ability to present ideas and findings in a clear, concise, high-level (senior management) format. Good presentation skills also include the ability to think “fast-on-your-feet” and “be prepared for anything.” Should be familiar with and comfortable using different presentation tools depending on situation (i.e. PowerPoint, transparencies, flipcharts, etc.)	Education - Presented marketing communications strategy for a novelty ice cream client. - Served as CEO in a simulated business environment; presented mock company’s performance, pinpointing key successes and obstacles. Experience - Persuaded Executive Board to launch a brand campaign; presented project milestones to senior management on a monthly basis. Additional - Presented educational topics at the Junior League’s monthly executive meetings.
Facilitation The ability to set an agenda and keep meeting participants on-track to realize goals of the meeting; the facilitator needs to make sure everyone is involved/engaged in the meeting at all times.	Education - Served as team leader for Competitive Strategy study group; ensured meetings were productive and efficient. Experience - Organized and led employee focus groups to obtain comparative data for a research product; utilized findings to implement an employee training program to align employee perceptions with customer perceptions. Additional - Chi Omega Rush Chairwoman - managed and oversaw over 20 committees; helped each committee set goals and tracked committee progress on a daily basis.
Negotiation The ability to reach your desired result via strategically timed presentation of facts and highlighting the benefits to other parties involved; the ability to compromise or design an alternate, mutually agreeable solution.	Experience - Negotiated support for two projects across an alliance with Pharmacia, an independently motivated company. - Convinced Regional Director to change client membership options, which resulted in approximately $20K of additional revenue for the office.
Communication The ability to summarize complex information/analyses into clear, succinct descriptions/recommendations both verbally and in writing. The ability to keep lines of communication open among all co-workers to ensure everyone has the same understanding.	Education - Wrote theatre reviews for Chicago Business newspaper Experience - Collaborated on a “marketing council” to maintain brand consistency between external design firms and internal designers. - Managed relationships with 15 key suppliers, including communicating quality and service expectations, confirming schedules, and measuring supplier performance. Additional - Tutored teenagers working towards their GED degree, at The Christopher House.

ATTRIBUTES

Attributes sought within your field.	Examples of how this attribute can be demonstrated on a resume.
Passion for understanding the consumer/customer The marketing student must want to understand what drives consumer behavior and what motivates them to purchase a specific product; one must understand the difference between business-to-consumer and business-to-business environments.	Education - Management Lab: Performed primary and secondary research on Chinese consumers to determine their level of acceptance of celebrity endorsers. Experience - Identified barriers to college admissions from NYC public schools through conducting interviews with principals and college counselors. - Developed and executed strategies to increase admissions through direct mail campaign to college admissions offices and ongoing college preparation program for students.
General understanding of careers that fall under the “marketing” umbrella Have knowledge about various marketing careers (i.e. brand management vs. product management vs. market research vs. customer relationship management vs. public relations/communications vs. advertising vs. general management/rotational programs vs. marketing consulting).	Education - Selected as a Marketing Career Advisor for the incoming class of MBA students Experience - Collaborated on a strategic development project to re-position the brand and coordinated the launch of the subsequent advertising campaign Additional - Presented to Arizona State University marketing majors twice a quarter regarding jobs in the marketplace
Understanding of the industry structure, trends, issues, “lingo,” etc. (and how marketing in that industry differs from others) The marketing student needs to familiarize him/herself with all of these as this knowledge will be important in interviewing; having an understanding of how marketing differs in various industries (CPG vs. pharma vs. services vs. tech, etc.) differentiates candidates	Experience - Served as the Lead Category Management Analyst for $600M dog food category – six month long project entailing restructuring of the company’s marketing, services and products for dog food category. Additional - Member of the Chicago chapter of The American Marketing Association
Knowledge of the marketplace (customers, competitors, products, etc.) The marketing student must take time to learn about companies’ businesses and what drives them.	Experience - Analyzed $40M infant formula marketing program for consumer packaged goods firm. Identified consumer touch points for client based on different segment needs, message consistency, and brand awareness. Created and prioritized initiatives to help client grow consumer base over five years and achieve long-term goals. Additional - Volunteer with the Small Business Administration to assist local businesses with their marketing efforts

Attributes sought within your field.	Examples of how this attribute can be demonstrated on a resume.
Involvement in student groups, industry associations, or functional groups Taking part in these groups are ways to show interest, passion, etc. in the applied field	Education - Member of the Marketing Group - Member of the Healthcare Group, High Tech Group, etc. Additional - Member of the Chicago chapter of The American Marketing Association

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

Areas of expertise sought within your field.	Examples of how this expertise can be demonstrated on a resume.
Functional expertise/transferability A brand management career involves working with people from multiple areas in order to manage a product or service offering. Any work experience in the following areas should be leveraged to indicate the student's understanding (market research, sales, advertising/promotion, production, distribution, accounting/finance, pricing, new product development, engineering, R&D, etc.)	Experience - Led a team charged with the creation of a new portion control "dipping cup." Worked with a cross functional team to develop cup design and sales program to be implemented next year. Additional - Volunteer Event Manager for local non-profit organization
Industry specific expertise The student should leverage experiences or interactions with specific industries (i.e. Consumer Packaged Goods, Pharma, Electronics, Office Products, Technology, Financial Services, Insurance, etc.)	Education - Winner of the Edward Kaplan New Venture Challenge. Organized and worked with a team of physicians and students from the University of Chicago that placed 3rd among 58 teams in annual business plan competition. Experience - Led cross-functional team and managed launch process for a bilingual package SKU, including sales materials, logistics and distribution. Additional - Active member of the American Marketing Association
Expertise with any of the data management packages (i.e. AC Nielsen, IRI, trend data, etc.)	Education - Researched and analyzed consumer demographics and psychographics in Simmons "Choices 3" database for class project. Experience - Analyzed store performance and customer data using lifestyle demographic tools to develop a decision-making matrix to evaluate possible store locations. - Analyzed and presented weekly performance of Kraft salad dressing using Nielsen data.