Dear Mr./Ms.<Recruiter Name> (or Dear Hiring Manager),

Please accept my application for the Assistant Brand Manager (ABM) position at [Firm Name]. As an MBA student concentrating in marketing at The University of Chicago Booth School of Business I am interested in marketing positions in the consumer packaged goods industry. [Firm Name] particularly interests me because of its focus on innovation and results-driven marketing—for example, the emphasis you place on your Powerbrand products' diverse portfolio offers many challenges for a developing marketer. This fact combined with your focus on growth, entrepreneurial culture, and giving your professionals the opportunity to work directly with line leaders to impact business objectives compels my interest in [Firm Name].

My passion for the field of marketing is a direct result of my work as a Senior Financial Manager at [Current Company]. Most recently in this role I was given the opportunity to spearhead a 12-month product management and marketing communications project. My work involved SKU rationalization and increasing sales through distribution partners. Through this I honed my project management experience and challenged me to work with cross-functional teams to find information and achieve results. I worked with large data sets to obtain recommendations to change the number of products my firm offered in order to maximize revenues. During the course of this assignment, I worked directly with customers to improve the sales and distribution channels in order to increase retailer spend.

In addition to my exposure to the technical skills required for a position within marketing, my past experience has prepared me to be a strong and innovative leader within the marketing profession. I was promoted from an analyst to the manager of a group that collected sales and consumer demographic information for my company's $8 billion real estate portfolio. A second promotion resulted from my efforts in that role, and I found myself one of the youngest Assistant Vice Presidents in the company. In this new role, I have had the opportunity to lead cross-functional teams to creatively find solutions for projects assigned by the CEO and CFO—a responsibility that has allowed me to spend much of my time analyzing our consumer base, segmenting the market, and evaluating the effectiveness of client promotions. My return to business school was motivated by my enjoyment of these marketing aspects of my work above all others. While my time at my current employer has been highly enjoyable, I am looking forward to the opportunity to apply my experience to a global company such as yours that has a stronger B2C focus.

This opportunity at [Firm Name] is exciting to me, and I believe the ABM position will allow me to apply my passion for marketing and consumer-based analytics to drive brand growth globally.

Sincerely,
<Your Name>
